LOCAL MERCHANTS OFFER SPECIALS IN VALUES.

Many of the local merchants are taking advantage of the "Times-Gazette's" new feature, "The Market Basket." In this it is the intention of this paper to show our readers that prices offered in Redwood City are as inviting as those shown in other towns, and in many cases are far better han those offered by merchants in larger cities. The attention of "Times-Gazette" readers is called to the "Market Basket." It is the hope of this paper that readers will give first consideration to the local merchant. If his goods are as represented and hos prices comparable to those of merchants of other places, he deserves your patronage. In the "Market Basket" you can learn what your local merchant has to offer.

CONTRACT LET FOR BUILDING ON BROADWAY

W. J. Munday has awarded a contract to Harry Groom for the erection of a modern one-story building on his property at 27 Broadway, commonly known as the Dielmann holding, held by him for many years, selling it to Mr. Munday several years ago. The proposed structure has been leased by the Jenny Wren chain of stores that has been incorporated with a capital stock of nearly $2,000,000. Work will not begin on the building until April 15. A number of concrete piles will have to be made and it will take thirty-five days for these to be finished. Sam Steen, the present lessee of the place, has secured quarters on Main street for his donut shop and cafe. His lease expires on April 15. The big structure will improve that portion of Broadway. The stipulated price of the contract is $17,500. The building in size will be 56x80 feet and will cover the entire lot.

Will Contested In Tripp Estate

Some six weeks ago R. H. Hellman, through his attorneys, Ross & Ross, filed a petition in the superior court asking that Gerald C. Halsey, executor of the estate of Addie Tripp, deceased, execute a deed to two and one-fifth acres of land, a part of a twenty-two and one-fifth tract at Woodside owned by the estate. The request was made under a contract and agreement to sell executed 13 years ago by the deceased. The price agreed upon was $500 an acre. Hellman alleges the contract is binding, while Halsey claims the contract was revoked by the death of Miss Tripp, and therefore failed to make the transfer. Thursday the Congregational Church of Woodside filed an opposition to the Hellman petition alleging that the price was entirely too low and that the land is now worth $2000 an acre. Under the terms of Miss Tripp's will the Congregational Church of Woodside secures a one third interest in the tract of twenty-two and one-fifth acres, hence its interest in the estate. The executor is represented in the matter by F. T. Leo and John D. Gish, and Hellman by Ross & Ross.

Miss Tripp was the only daughter of the late R. O. Tripp and his only heir. She left an estate appraised at $35,24 .44 bequeathed to friends and relatives and the Congregational Church of Woodside of which she was a member for a great many years.

R. O. Tripp was one of the first residents of Woodside and the first postmaster on the peninsula. He established a merchandise store at Woodside in the early fifties on the tract of land now in dispute.

Bayshore Highway To be In Use Inside of Month. City Is Hit By Measure

ECONOMY WAVE RESULTS IN LOSS OF POSITIONS

The economy wave made necessary in the city government of this city by the depleted condition of the city treasury, resulted in several employees of the city departments losing their jobs. The departments affected were the street and police departments. The former was reduced to four employees and from the latter two members were dismissed. The policemen whose places were abolished were Eli Smith and Clyde Genochio. The latter, however, is working in place of Joe Roza, who is ill.

Rumors current in town this week indicate that the condition of the treasury is very bad. A special meeting of the board of trustees will be called as soon as the auditors who are now at work on the books of the late Frank K. Towne are able to complete their task of investigation. Following this meeting, it is reported, the status of the matter will be made public.

It is also rumored that the affair may result in the appointment of a city manager and the adoption of a city manager form of government. The appointment of a manager is reported to be under consideration by the board of trustees.

Reports that the bonds under which Towne was working as treasurer were not valid were denied by the board of trustees. It is also reported that the bondsmen may not only be responsible for the bonds now in effect but may be held for a portion at least of bonds signed for Towne during former terms of office. The latter contingency was made possible by the report that shortages in the city treasury may go back for several years.

ANNEXATION IS DEFEATED IN NORTH FAIR OAKS

The North Fair Oaks district adjacent to Redwood City on the south at an election held last Friday voted by a large majority not to seek annexation to Redwood City at the present time. The vote cast showed 17 in favor of annexation and 68 against. A similar proposition was voted upon by the people of this district on October 5, 1926, and at that time was defeated by a majority of 37 to 29. Since that time several residents of the section have been active in seeking to have the territory annexed to this city. It was thought that the proposition would carry this time, but the uncertain state of the city treasury is said to have made the people reluctant to join with Redwood City at the present time.

T. C. M'GOVERN INDUCTED INTO SHERIFF OFFICE

By Mrs. Laura F. Collins

Sheriff Thomas C. McGovern, familiarly known as "Brick" by his close associates, was inducted into office as Sheriff of San Mateo County at Redwood City, January 3, 1927.

Sheriff McGovern's victory was won at the primary election when he beat his opponent by 6,101 votes.

The votes won at the primary election, together with the large complimentary vote scored at the general election, gave Sheriff McGovern the enviable record of being the first, of any county official, to receive the highest number of votes cast in San Mateo County to date, since the county's organization in 1856.

Sheriff McGovern ranks as the sixteenth Shriff of San Mateo county, his experience of over fifteen years of service being attained when he served as deputy sheriff under the administration of Sheriffs Robert S. Chatham, the late J. H. Mansfield, Michael Sheehan and the late H. W. Lampkin.

Born and reared in San Mateo county, of which his late parents were pioneers, gives Sheriff McGovern the advantage of knowing every short cut, path and roadway which is a great aid in running down crime. Time saved in reaching scenes of trouble plays an important part in the duties of a sheriff and one knowing the lay of the land in San Mateo county as well as Sheriff McGovern gains over the person who is unfamiliar with short road cuts.

The new sheriff has over 400 square miles of territory to guard, the larger portion of this being on the coast side and areas outside of the incorporated cities.

San Mateo county is growing by leaps and bounds and more deputies are needed to assist the sheriff in carrying out the increased amount of work which is enlarging daily.

Sheriff McGovern's many friends predict a successful term of office and entertain hopes that he will be re-elected for a second term when the present one terminates.

Mrs. Collins is well-known in Redwood City, having spent her girlhood here. She is the daughter of the late W. H. Meacham, a widely known newspaper man. Mrs. Collins inherited the literary ability of her father and is a writer of more than ordinary aptitude. Her article in last week's Times-Gazette on the records of the sheriffs of the county is quite interesting, giving a history of the past sheriffs that held office in the county.

TO COLLECT INCOME TAX AT COURT HOUSE

Gus B. Risso and Frank Fopplano, two expert income tax collectors from the Internal Revenue department of the government, have been here all week in the supervisor's room of the court-house, gathering in sheckels for Uncle Sam. Not only are they efficient and courteous officials, but are also kind and considerate with the taxpayers when they come to settle with the government. These men report that there are not as many responses as they expected in Redwood City. They will be here until Saturday to accommodate the people and urge all to come and settle their indebtedness to Uncle Samuel.

BAYSHORE ROAD TO BE EXTENED THRU REDWOOD

Inside of a month the Bayshore Road will be in use between Redwood City and Menlo Park. All the rights of way were secured this week from the various property holders abutting on the proposed road between here and Menalto avenue, a direct road to Palo Alto. In a short time the work of grading will begin after which a thin coating of gravel will be put down so that the public may travel over the thoroughfare with ease and comfort. The State Highway Commission has given permission to have the work done for the benefit of the travelling public. When the money is available for a permanent road the work will be rushed on this strip.

The announcement that the Bayshore road is to be opened for use is a big thing for Redwood City. It means that nearly all travel from the Dumbarton bridge will be routed through this city. Thousands of motorists will use this city road which is 125 feet wide and is in a direct line with but few curves and does not pass a railroad track in its course to Palo Alto.

The extra one cent tax on gasoline provided by a bill just passed by the state legislature and soon to be signed by the governor will give sufficient money for the construction of the road. No doubt the work of macadamizing the thoroughfare will start next summer. The completion of this road from San Francisco to San Jose together with the new Dumbarton bridge is the biggest thing that has come to Redwood City for many years.

FIRE IN SMALL BUILDING MAKES FIREMEN HUSTLE

A fire of unknown origin early Wednesday morning called the local firemen from warm beds into the frosty air of a March morning. The scene of the blaze was a small shed on the property of William Stewart at 313 Stambaugh street, adjoining a large hay barn belonging to the same owner. The utmost efforts of the firemen were needed to prevent the spread of the flames to the larger barn, as the fire in the small buildings had gained considerable headway when the alarm was sent in.

Marking the virtual removal of an important obstacle to definite progress in the Pine Flat project, and thereby bringing action by the state authorities a long step closer, Kings county irrigation units have tentatively agreed upon settlement of their differences over the division of water allocated to them under the proposed Pine Flat schedule. While the three Kings county units, People's Ditch company, Lemoore Canal and Irrigation company, and the Last Chance Water Ditch company have been agreed for some time upon the aggregate allocation to their area from the gross volume of Kings river flow, as set up in the schedule of distribution proposed under the Pine Flat organization scheme, there has existed a difference of opinion concerning the proportion that each unit should receive.

Peter Fitzpatrick, aged Modesto rancher, has often read tales of buried treasure, but recently the tales crystalized into reality, when he found $120 in twenty-dollar gold pieces in a squirrel hole on his property. Fitzpatrick was walking on his ranch when he saw a twenty-dollar gold piece on the ground. Picking it up, he saw that it rested on the edge of a squirrel hole. He marked the spot, and went back next day with a spade. He believes that squirrels dug down to the buried treasure quite by accident, built a nest there, and that in their frequent trips to the surface dragged a coin toward the top little by little, until it could be seen. The coins were all dated prior to 1884. A man who lived there fifty or more years ago buried the money, Fitzpatrick believes.

As one of his last official acts former Governor Friend W. Richardson appointed to office a man dead for more than fourteen years, it was revealed in Sacramento recently. On December 29, five days before he was succeeded, the then governor named Rev. Robert E. Kenna as a member of the California Redwood Park Commission Father Kenna, late president of Santa Clara University, died in 1912. The error was caused, it is believed, by the practice of including in the commission's membership the president of the University of Santa Clara. For this reason it is understood that Governor Young, rectifying the mistake, will appoint Father McCoy, now president of the college.

Believed to have been the oldest Mason in central California, Nathan Emory Deyoe, 87, wealthy Modesto pioneer, died at his home in Modesto following a heart attack. Deyoe came to Modesto in 1877, after engaging in the hotel business in Michigan, Illinois and California. He opened the first furniture store in this city, retiring in 1905. Since that time he has engaged in agriculture, having purchased large tracts of land adjacent to Modesto which he later subdivided. He was prominently identified with the early development of Modesto.

James Reade Watson has retired from the faculty of the Polytechnic High school in San Francisco and has taken up his home on a ranch he purchased near Guerneville more than forty years ago. He has erected a new home, which is richly furnished. Among the collection of pictures is an oil painting 230 years old, which he purchased in Mexico. Watson first settled in Petaluma in 1867.

Sequoia and General Grant National Parks, Balch Park, the mountain redwood acreage presented to Tulare county by Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Balch of Los Angeles several years ago, and other popular playgrounds of the county will be featured in the Tulare county exhibit at the Transcontinental Highways Exposition at Reno, Nev., June 21 to August 1, according to announcements.

One of the sights which greets the eye of the Yosemite-bound tourist on the Raymond-Coarse Gold Road is the Coarse Gold Baptist Indian Mission Chapel. The reason for a second look is the strange architecture, for the logs are not in the conventional method, parallel with the ground, but stand upright. Striking indeed is such a building, because so unusual. Everything possible has been done to preserve the rustic effect. Even the tower is of logs, set upright, and the rafters are also of native wood. The inside is not finished, except that the bark is off the trees, as it is also outside.

The creation of a regional park to include the crater portion of the Sutter Buttes, Sutter county, to contain a large artificial lake to be formed by damming two water outlets will be considered at a regional conference of Cutter, Colusa, Butte and Yuba counties.

It's often said that gasoline buggies are relegating the poor old horse to oblivion, but a bit of tangible proof was offered by the state statistician. There are only 290,000 horses left in California, according to the records, or 12,000 less than there were a year ago.

A total of 1,964 acres in the Santa Maria valley is planted to cauliflower.

Turkey shipments out of Willows this season will break all past records, according to W. M. Kirkpatrick, Willows dealer.

A home-building boom is under way in Pinedale, two new homes having been completed with several others under construction.

A spectacular three-alarm fire that burned the California Tallow Works to the ground in San Francisco recently did damage estimated at $150,000.

Sacramento's $850,000 Civic Auditorium, declared to be one of the most completely equipped structures of its kind in the west, was formally dedicated on Tuesday, February 22.

The central San Joaquin valley, with its large acreage of irrigated land and diversity of crops, is looking forward to 1927 as one of the best years in its history, even exceeding that of 1926, which has set a record for total production.

Chico Art Club members have been offered a site for clubhouse purposes in the new subdivision east of town, according to an announcement made by the chairman of the building committee which has been seeking a site and means to finance the building of a home for several years.

The American Petroleum Institute announced that the total production of crude oil in California during January amounted to 20,184,872 barrels, and that the total stock on the Pacific Coast territory at the end of January was 148,327,007 barrels, an increase of 2,217,831 barrels. The institute also announced that 103 wells had been completed with an initial daily production of 46,370 barrels.

Murder is on the decrease in California, considering the number of crimes on the basis of population, it was revealed in the first compilation of the murder rate ever attempted by the state government. Despite modern "crime waves" a state survey of murder records for the last year shows there were only 8.33 homicides to every 100,000 residents in California, or approximately one person slain out of every 12,000.

Early risers of the Manning community, Fresno county, were treated to a rare sight in the form of a moon rainbow. The conditions for such a phenomenon were ideal following a heavy shower recently, which had passed to the east and which left the western sky almost clear. The primary bow was well defined and fairly bright, and formed a complete arc at a rather low angle. The secondary bow was not so distinct, yet it could be easily traced.

Thousands of quail, both valley and mountain varities, have been driven from the higher elevations by the winter snows and are found in Surprise valley, Modoc county, feeding with the chickens in the barnyards or making themselves at home around the farmers' haystacks. Quail in bunches of twenty to fifty are common sights on the streets and in the back yards of the town of Cedarville, and are so tame that they will pick up grain within a few feet of a person's feet.

Father John M. Cassin, Santa Rosa, will have been pastor for thirty-seven years in May. Recently he recounted the fact that when he first came to Santa Rosa 37 years ago a redwood tree in the ground of Ursuline College was about ten feet, now in the intervening years the tree is 75 feet high, or as tall as the cross on top of the tower of St. Ursula's chapel. This is regarded as a fair indication of the growth made by redwood trees away from their regular environment in the woods.

Stockmen report the best rain visiting the foothill section a short time ago, that has been received at Clavicle, Tulare county, for eight or ten years. Green feed has been abundant the entire season, affording pasture for large herds of feeder cattle. Beef stock is reported in good condition and will be in prime condition for early city shipments in the spring. Sales have been frequent this winter, both locally and otherwise, due to the abundance of feed always at hand, as a result of the rainy winter.

Several of the poultry fanciers of St. Helena, Napa county, had been missing their hens of late, and Mrs. James Mitchell found twenty-one large Wyandottes dead. Captain Dan Gardner and others reported losses and it was up to Jack Corallo to catch the guilty culprit. He secured several steel traps and placed one inside of his chicken yard and one on the outside where he figured the thief would enter. He was rewarded by catching a dog with his fore feet in the inside trap and the hind feet in the outside trap.

Drink Water to Help Wash Out Kidney Poison

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Begin Taking Salts

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

Charter Government

Much thought has been given recently by those whose interests are tied up with those of this county to the advisability of changing our form of county government and the adoption of a charter for the county. The present form of county government was, according to the grand jury's report, made in the horse and carriage days, and suited to conditions of that time. San Mateo county has increased many fold in population, the taxes collected in a year now would have run the county government for ten years at the time the county was formed and matters of greater importance are arising daily to be settled by our county government.

Under the charter form of government the greater number of the county employees would be under the civil service and would hold their positions as long as they were able to give efficient service. This would put the county government into the class of any big business concern where business is conducted along business and not political lines.

Speaking editorially on this matter the San Mateo Times has outlined the following advantages of the charter government for this county:

"It will emancipate San Mateo county from the domination of the State Legislature.

"It will insure a scientific and fair reappraisal of property so that the tax burden will be justly distributed.

"It will fix responsibility so that the voters can judge properly whether their public servants have done their duty.

"It would take the mass of county employees out of politics by placing them under civil service.

"It could establish a budget system and force the supervisors to hold public meetings for consideration of each year's budget.

"It would provide the machinery for the recall of all elective and appointive officers of the county.

"It would apply the methods of successful private business to the county's affairs by making the purchasing agent responsible for the buying of all supplies for the county.

"It would give the county surveyor the authority of a highway engineer, thus placing all road work in the county under a trained man.

"It would make all constables ex-officio deputy sheriffs and place them under the orders of the sheriff, unifying this law enforcement branch of the local government."

Intelligentty Planned Highway Systems

The increasing trend toward motor vehicle transportation has intensified the necessity of intelligently planned highway systems. The plan of state highway improvement may materially alter the economic and social development of a people as a whole, or any section. Dr. J. G. McKay, of the Bureau of Public Roads, points out that the location and improvement or lack of improvement of a given route is of vital importance not only to the traffic of the immediate locality, but also to the traffic of larger areas. He says:

"The development of a system of highways should be considered in terms of the movement of people and goods. The planning and construction of a connected system of highways deal with the destiny of localities and states, their agriculture, their industries, the growth of suburban areas adjacent to centers of population, and the social activities of the people. This is a tremendous responsibility. There can be no question concerning the necessity of developing sound plans for highway improvement over a period of years in the several states, and of providing the necessary money to carry out economically the proposed plans of improvement."

Road construction is not now the problem that it was. The immense tractors and our heavy road machinery take the place of hundreds of men and horses formerly necessary, and minimize possibility of labor troubles; to say nothing of making it possible to complete a given job in much less time.

Our main through-highways must be paved with some material requiring little maintenance, and which can be repaired, when necessary, while the highway is in use—eliminating costly detours with their waste of time and inconvenience.

Mrs. Elizabeth M. Kneese is Chosen Secretary at Convention

At the annual convention o County Clerk's of the state held in Sacramento last week Mrs. Elizabeth M. Kneese, the popular county clerk of San Mateo County, was chosen unanimously secretary of that body, a position she has enjoyed since 1919, when she was first elected county clerk of this county. The honor is all the more appreciated by the fact that Mrs. Kneese was unable to attend the convention owing to illness and she was chosen regardless of non-attendance. Mrs. Kneese is one of the best known and most efficient county clerks in the state.

'Pa' and 'Ma' at Sequoia

W. C. FIELDS and MARY ALDEN in a scene from "THE POTTERS" showing at the Sequoia Theatre, next Monday and Tuesday, March 7 and 8. A human-interest comedy of a typical Americano fun.

Fields Comes Back to Old "Happy Hunting Grounds"

Misses Applause While Filming New Comedy, "The Potters."

If you should happen to be in New York and see a man with a hungry look in his eyes roaming Broadway, a long, black cigar in mouth, snooping in and out of theatre lobbies, listening, moving on again, like one in a trance, you'll know who it is. His name is W. C. Fields, the more than well-known comedian, star of Paramount's picture, "The Potters," arriving at the Sequoia Theatre, Monday and Tuesday, March 7 and 8.

If you should ask him what he's doing, roaming thus anxiously about the old haunts where in his pre-movie days he was a laugh-getter in the Ziegfeld Follies and other Broadway musical productions, he would tell you that he couldn't sleep, that he was listening for the ghostly clapping of hands and the once familiar roars of laughter.

"The hardest thing for a former stage player to get used to in movie work," says Fields, "is to do your stuff minus applause or encouragement before a handful of cameramen and technical directors. You wonder if you're getting across, and there's no way of finding out. Moreover, for one who has played on the stage some thirty years, never getting to bed before two or three in the morning, it's hard as the dickens to turn up for work each day at nine.

"I tried my darndest, but I couldn't do it.. So, now I spend my evenings on the old camping ground. I can generally find a theatre showing one of my pictures—'So's Your Old Man' or 'The Potters' and I drop in to listen for the laughter and applause I missed while making the film."

LANDSCAPING OF THE PREMISES WORTHY OF CAREFUL CONSIDERATION

This is the second of a series of articles written by A. Groves, a florist of East Palo Alto. The next article will follow in the next issue of this paper.

The building of a home and the landscaping of the premises surrounding it are subjects worthy of your careful consideration, as what you do in the beginning, be it good or bad, will be a source of great pleasure, enjoyment and pride, or it will be a continual eye-sore to yourself and to your neighbors.

In the first article I outlined the necessity of securing a home and improvements to suit your likes and requirements, assuming that you have the place that suits you, the next important step will be to plan and plant it to shrubs, plants and lawns. This cannot be successfully done unless you prepare the grounds; to do this, if the grounds are of considerable size, the work can be done more economically by plowing and harrowing; if smaller, or so cut up that a plow cannot reach to all places, then it is best to dig with a spade, and broken up as deeply as the spade can reach, in order to bring some of the sub-soil to the surface, and if well rotted barnyard manure is available, dig it liberally into the soil and break up, as much as possible, all clods, and remove any rocks or other objectional refuse. Do not spade the ground up when it is too wet, and if too dry, then it is best to wet enought to allow it to be spaded, bearing in mind that the more thoroughly the ground is worked the easier it will be to take care of it after you have planted it.

I shall not elaborate much on the digging up of the grounds, for every one knows that it is mostly elbow and other greases that turns the ground over, and will give more attention to the brainwork of planning and planting.

I have said, in a former article, there is no established rule in landscaping. If there was, then there would be so much of the sameness that it would be monotonous and would cease to be landscaping.

If you are planning to put in a lawn, it would be best to plant the whole grounds to the grass and cut out for the small beds for the plants and shrubs you expect to plant.

It is just the right time now to get busy in the flower garden. Most of the shrubs are dormant and can be planted until they begin to leaf out. After they begin to leaf out, they are not so safely transplanted, but even after they have begun to grow, if they are in flower pots or other containers, any plant or shrub or tree can be transplanted, even in the hottest summer weather.

In planting shrubs you should select such as are known to grow in your neighborhood, such as Italia cypress, for distinctive and column-like growth the veronicas, in their many varieties, are well liked, and grow under the most adverse conditions. They flower well and stand severe trimming. Other shrubs, such as cotoneaster, pyracanthia and barberry, are the finest for berried shrubs. For flowers, hydrangias, delphineums, geum, choysias and many others to choose from, are all strong growers.

For bedding plants, pansies, primroses, daisies, verbenas, petumias and many others, can be planted no wand will furnish an abundant profusion of flowers throughout the whole season.

Roses are always standard, and are best planted as soon as possible, but select such varieties as are mildue resisting. The florist knows; when buying, ask him.

In my next article I shall write more on such plants as are seasonable to plant at this time.

S. F. PREPARES PLANS FOR AIRPORT IN THIS COUNTY

The grading and preparation of the temporary airport to be maintained near San Bruno in this county by the city of San Francisco was ordered this week by the board of supervisors of that city. The work will be performed under the direction of the board of works. Money for the work is now available in San Francisco and the work will be hastened that the field may be ready for use as soon as possible.

The field at San Bruno has been secured upon a lease and will be used by the city until a site for a permanent air field can be selecfed. Several sites are being considered by the irport committee for the permanent location, including the Sweeny ranch in this city which was offered to San Francisco by D. R. Stafford.

Bank of Italy Is Nationalized

National Trust and Savings Association.

Nationaliation of the Bank of Italy, and the conversion of its statewide system of branches into Bank of Italy, National Trust and Savings Association, has been formally approved by the Comptroller of the Currency, and the Federal Reserve Board, it was announced today by James A. Bacigalupi, president of the institution.

The entire organipation will be merged immediately into the National system, and on Tuesday morning, all of the branch offices will open for business under the new designation.

"Nationalization of the Bank of Italy, under the provisions of the McFadden Act is the concluding step in the perfection of our statewide ervice," said Bacigalupi. "Nationalization not only means continuing operation within the Federal Reserve System, but also insures for the institution the full benefit of the modernized powers conferred upon National Banks. For a considerable period the Bank of Italy has held an important role in the finances of the nation and the world, ad also as the largest member of the Federal Reserve System in the Twelfth District. The time has now come when the bank should assume the responsibility that attends the national prominence to which it has risen, and we believe the most direct way in which to do this is through pursuing our present course.

"In addition, it is obvious that California is certain to gain in prestige by possessing the second largest National bank in America in the rank published by Financial Age of New York and as ardent Californians, we can scarcely be unmindful of whatever may redound to the benefit of the state in which the institution was cradled, and in which it has experienced such prosperity."

The Bank of Italy is credited with the second largest holdings of Government bonds in the United States, ranking next to the First Natiinal Bank of New York.

WITH THE APPROVAL OF THE

COMPTROLLER OF CURRENCY

OF THE UNITED STATES

A NATIONAL CHARTER HAS BEEN GRANTED TO THE BANK OF ITALY, EFFECTIVE MARCH 1st, 1927, AS THE

BANK OF ITALY

NATIONAL TRUST AND SAVINGS ASSOCIATION

NATIONALIZATION OF the Bank of Italy not only means continuing operations within the Federal Reserve System, but also insures for the customers of the institution the full benefit of those advantages conferred upon National Banks by the congressional enactment.

The Bank of Italy has long ranked among the Nation's foremost banks both with respect to its aggregate resources and invested capital. The Executives of the institution have therefore accepted nationalization believing the time is now ripe to assume the responsibilities that attach to the prominence which the Bank of Italy holds in this country and abroad.

Through this action it is certain that California will gain added prestige; and as an institution operating exclusively in California, covering its important communities from the Oregon line to the Mexican border, the Bank of Italy cannot be unmindful of whatever may redound to the benefit of this great State.

As a member of the National Association, the Bank of Italy will continue to serve the people of California, seeking always to provide the greatest measure of banking convenience and attending with genuine interest to the needs of its customers.

Two Principles

ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL discovered an electrical principle upon which a great communications art has been founded.

Those who undertook to give practical value to his discovery likewise left to their successors a principle of serviee, that has been developed into an intercommunicating system of over 17,000,000 telephones.

Both of these principles were built upon and developed with the same objective,—that of enabling men to talk one to another easily, conveniently, cheaply. With nation-wide telephone service already an accomplished fact, these principles still continue to act and react upon each other, producing new ideals of service, new goals toward which to strive.

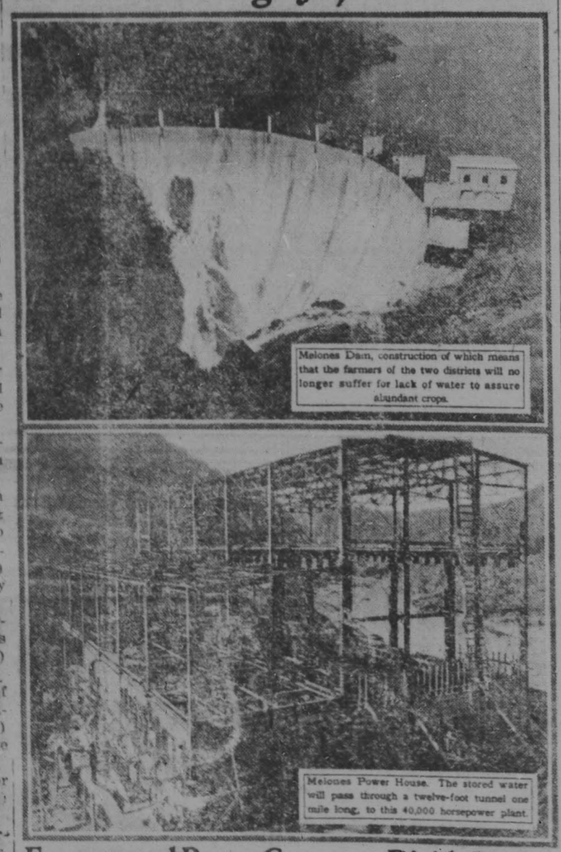
Overflow Brings Joy to Farmers



Melones Dam, construction of which means that the farmers of the two districts will no longer suffer for lack of water to assure abundant crops.

Melones Power House. The stored water will pass through a twelve-foot tunnel one mile long, to this 40,000 horsepower plant.

Farmers and Power Company Divide Big Job

Through a co-operative agreement, the Oakdale and South San Joaquin Irrigation Districts built this great restraining wall at a cost of $2,200,000. It is 210 feet high, 585 feet along the crest, and capable of storing 112,500 acre feet of water for the use of farmers and makers of electricity.

The Pacific Gas and Electric Company, a party to the contract, is building a $2,500,000 power plant, one mile down stream from the dam and will buy water for operating the power house, from the farmers at a rate sufficient to retire the districts' bonds and interest in forty years, thus relieving the farmers of financial burden.

The water, after passing through the power house, will then be diverted into the Irrigation Districts' flumes and ditches for use on their lands.

BIG TREE IS REMOVED

The big sequoia gigantia in the front lawn of the courthouse grounds and planted in 1912 was removed this week by the county gardener, A. J. Carleton. It began to wither and decay two years ago despite the care and attention given it by the gardener. This specie of the sequoia matures to perfection in Mariposa, where the big tree groves attract the tourists of the world and is one of the big wonders of California. The tree sends forth roots that travel a long distance. It is supposed that the roots of this three has reached sal water, which lies only a short distance beliw the surface. Another variety will take its place.

GORGAS MEMORIAL INSTITUTE

WHY DO WE HAVE SMALLPOX

By J. W. Amesse, M. D., Denver, Colo.
Member of Gorgas Memorial Institute.

There is no sensible reason for the thousands of cases of smallpox each year in the United States. That there are smallpox cases is due primarily to the peculiar attitude of the public mind toward all revolutionary achievements in science and, in these latter days, "to a class of people who seek in every possible way to avoid vaccination."

Opposition is sometimes offered on the grounds of personal liberty and so it is interesting to consider a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States denying this point, which was rendered April 11, 1905, when the compulsory vaccination law of Massachusetts was upheld. It states: "The liberty secured by the Constitution of the United States does not import an absolute right in each person to be, at all times and in all circumstances, wholly freed from restraint. Real liberty for all could not exist under the operation of a principle which recognies the right to use his own, whether in respect to his person or his property, regardless of the injury that may be done to others."

Now what is vaccination, and what has it accomplished

Jenner believed, and subsequent investigations have borne him out, that cowpox was simply modified smallpox. The procedure we call vaccination consists, then, in introducing into the human system attenuated virus, obtaied from baby calves that have previously been inoculated with a select strain of the microscopical organism causing smallpox.

This operation, followed by a mild local and constitutional disturbances and unattended by danger when pure virus is employed and proper cleanliness observed, immunies the recipient for a variable period against smallpox. In many, a single vaccination suffices for life, but most persons require at least two inoculations to maintain the systemic antagonism to this specific contagion. The horrors of epidemic smallpox, as seen in the pre-Jennerian era, have been spared us so that we have grown indifferent to its ravages and contemptuous toward the sole measure which has defied its progress. "Without vaccination, and with the present intercommunication, smallpox would be a pandemic, sweeping over the entire world."

A study of the history of smallpox and of vaccination by any fairly informed person would justify the following conclusions:

That in vaccination we have one of the safest, simplest, and most important specific prophylactics in the field of preventive medicine.

That, of itself, it is essentially harmless, the infections sometimes complicating the operation are due to faulty technique on the part of the physician or unskilful handling on the part of the patient.

That compulsory health laws of this character, while apparently antagonized and oppressive, must consent to be enforced so long as public sentiment in purely medical affairs questions or denies the decisions of large experience and ripe judgment,

CANCER—HOW TO FIGHT IT

By G. E. Pfahler, M. D., Philadelphia, Pa.
Member of Gorgas Memorial Institute.

Cancer is the cause of one out of every ten deaths over the age of twenty. It may occur at any age, but occurs most frequently between the ages of forty and sixty.

Through the leadership of the medical profession, together with individual and united efforts of the public in the fight against the infectious diseases such as measles, scarlet fever, whooping cough, diphtheria, typhoid fever, and tuberculosis, the deaths from these causes have been reduced about 50 per cent during the past twenty years. This has given an average prolongation of life, but has carried more people into the cancer age. This must, therefore, account at least one cause for the increase of nearly fifty per cent in the deaths during the same thirty years.

The exact cause of cancer is not known, but we do know that cancer does not begin in healthy tissue and that, if the tissues are kept in a healthy condition, cancer will not be likely to develop. To this end all warts, moles (especially if undergoing change), irritable sores, and recurring crusts should be removed or properly cared for.

Sores in the mouth, white patches or sore or ulcer on the lip, tongue, cheek, or throat that does not begin to heal within two weeks should receive skilful medical treatment. Any tumor may be cancer, or may change into cancer.

Indigestion which recurs frequently should be carefully investigated and properly treated. Any abnormal discharge from the body should arouse suspicion and should be definitely proven not to be due to cancer. Cancer does not indicate any blood taint, implies no disgrace, is not contagious, and is not painful at the beginning.

No serum or medicine has been found that will cure cancer, but that applies also to tuberculosis, and yet through watchful care tuberculosis can be prevented and, if properly treated at the beginning, can be cured. Likewise, if cancer is recognized and treated at the beginning while it is still a local disease, it can be cured in the great majority of cases.

One may compare a cancer to a fire. A fire can easily be put out, even by a pitcher of water, if it is recognized and treated properly at the beginning. But the more the fire has spread, the more difficult it is to fight and the more damage will be done. Depending upon the nature of things, the fire or the cancer may develop very slowly and the fight may be successful, although begun very late, or it may develop very rapidly and delay may lose the fight.

To prevent a fire, the fire underwriters inspect the building and have the conditions removed which lead to fire. To fight cancer, have the body inspected so as to remove the conditions which precede cancer or, if this has not been done, have the cancer treated skilfully and thoroughly from the beginning.

APPENDICITIS DEATHS PREVENTED BY PROMPT ACTION

By Harry G. Sloan, M. D., Cleveland, Ohio.
Member Gorgas Memorial Institute.

More than sixteen thousand people die from appendicitis annually. The death rate is not so far short of the number killed in automobile accidents each year. And the greater number of deaths from appendicitis occur in early adult life when the individual has his period of greatest usefulness ahead of him.

The reasons for this largely preventable mortality are three: failure of the individual to appreciate the seriousness of his pain; failure to understand the damage which may be done by taking a cathartic when in abdominal pain; delay in operation.

What will lead one to suspect he ought to call in the doctor?

Pain in the pit of the stomach, first. Next the unfortunate one is nauseated and vomits. The pain continues and after several hours shifts to the right side below the navel. There is a degree or two of fever.

As intimated, the family physician should be called in immediately to determine the cause of the pain. If the physician thinks the pain is caused by appendicitis he will refer the patient to a surgeon at once.

"Just why is it dangerous to take a cathartic at this time" is a question most laymen do not understand. The cathartic starts an increased activity of the intestines. This may cause a "blowout" through the walls of the appendix where it has been weakened by inflammation. If this happens, the covering of the intestines becomes soiled with intestinal contents and peritonitis results.

It is rare to find a broken appendix when a cathartic has not been taken beforehand. Rarely in an adult an appendix breaks within twenty-four hours from the onset of pain, even when a cathartic has been taken. Earlier rupture of the appendix may happen in children.

When the diagnosis of appendicitis has been made, it is dangerous to delay operation. This is because, by the most exact method of investigation, the doctor is unable to predict accurately whether rupture of the wall of the appendix is imminent. During the delay the appendix may break.

Some cases of acute appendicitis recover without operation; many die.

The operation for appendicitis, if undertaken before the appendix breaks, has a death rate of only a fraction of one per cent. If operation is undertaken after the appendix has ruptured, about one out of ten may be expected to die. When the operation is undertaken after rupture has taken place and spreading peritonitis sets in, the chances for recovery are one out of two.

Since only a few hours in the progress of the disease may make a huge difference in the number of recoveries, it is quite apparent why immediate operation is safest, once the diagnosis of acute appendicitis has been made.

DIPHTHERIA CASES—REFLECTION ON INTELLIGENCE

By Rowland G. Freeman, M. D., New York City.
Member Gorgas Memorial Institute.

In New York City there are at present approximately 200 cases of diphtheria reported to the Board of Health every week and this notwithstanding the fact that it would be possible for the Board of Health to eliminate practically all diphtheria from New York in three months if the Board saw it to use all the authority it has.

The reason why the Board of Health does not make use of this power is because the public is not yet educated to an appreciation of the harmlessness of the treatment and the necessity for it. The occurrence of any diphtheria in New York at the present time is a reflection on the intelligence of the community, and the same thing may be said of any city in the United States.

Diphtheria is a highly contagious disease which causes slight fever, a ratrer sore throat, swellings in the neck, and is generally associated with severe prostration.

A membrane grows in the throat, the nose, or the larynx, and this is the source of the poison that is diffused throughout the patient.

Diphtheria is carried by the sputum of an individual who has the disease. When such an individual talks, coughs, or sneezes, this infectious sputum is carried several feet in front, to the side, and somewhat behind the individual. Anyone who receives a particle of this sputum in his mouth is likely to contract the disease if he is not immune.

Diphtheria is a very serious disease which can usually be recognized by the physician, but is often recognized late because the pysician is not called early.

About 65 per cent of children and 35 per cent of adcits are susceptible to this disease yet susceptibility may be determined by a simple injection, the Schick test, which causes no general disturbance and is not associated with any danger.

People found susceptible by the Schick test may be usually completely immunized for life by three hypodermic injections of toxin antitoxin, at intervals of a week, which usually do not disturb the recipient at all.

Three months after these injections a Schick test is again used to ascertain if the person has been completely immunized. One-fifth of the cases require a second series of injections.

Through the use of these agents antitoxin, the Schick test, and toxin antitoxin, both the number of cases and the deaths from diphtheria have been markedly reduced. If all children were immunized death from diphtheria would soon be eliminated.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

France and Italy Reject Coolidge Proposal for Naval Limitation.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

POLITELY but firmly, France and Italy have said "No" to President Coolidge's proposal that the five signatory powers of the Washington treaty negotiate a further reduction in naval armaments by limiting cruisers, submarines and other auxiliary vessels. Great Britain has showed approval of the plan, but delayed her formal reply until the dominions could be consulted. Premier Wakatsuki said the Japanese government was strongly in favor of Mr. Coolidge's move and would do everything in its power to aid, but he intimated that Japan would not agree to a 5-5-3 ratio for cruisers and other lighter vessels.

The French government pronounced the American plan impracticable and in conflict with the aims and accomplishments of the preparatory disarmament commission of the League of Nations. It expressed the opinion that an agreement on further naval armaments limitation entered into by the five powers independently of the league undertaking for comprehensive limitation of land, sea and air armaments would compromise the latter project. The basic reason for France's rejection of the plan is her determination to make naval limitation dependent upon agreements as to the limitation of land and air forces. This she has consistently demanded at the Geneva conference. She is bound to maintain her submarine strength as a defense against the powerful British navy and the growing Italian fleet, and while those are as strong as they are, she refuses to decrease her land forces.

Because France is her potential rival in the Mediterranean, Italy also rejects the Coolidge proposal. She declines to participate in any conference on limitation so long as France refuses to limit lighter naval craft, especially submarines. She cannot at present compete with France in building cruisers and so must counter with plenty of submarines.

Washington dispatches said that Mr. Coolidge, realizing now that a five-power parley was out of the question, was considering an alternative proposal that the United States, Great Britain and Japan get together and extend the 5-5-3 limitation ratio to cruisers and other light naval craft. Admiral Jones, chairman of the navy's general board, has devised a formula that he believes would satisfy the British even with France left out of the agreement. He proposes a proviso to the limitation to the effect that any party to the agreement may exceed the maximum laid down whenever it considers its security menaced by the naval building operations of another power.

THAT Germany, with its cleverly constructed reichswehr, has evaded the efforts of the powers to effect its disarmament is the opinion of the military authorities of both France and Belgium. Laying before the French chamber of deputies the government's plans for reorganization of the army on a basis of 12 months of efficient, concentrated service of conscripts, Minister of War Painleve, Marshal Foch and General Debeney, chief of staff, described Germany's great potential military strength and the dangers involved. Minister of Defense de Broqueville of Belgium was still more of an alarmist. Asking parliament for frontier fortifications, he produced figures to show that the reichswehr is a formidable military force with the most modern of armaments. It consists of 100,000 soldiers and 15,000 sailors and renews itself every four years, and therefore 200,000 reservists are now available. Premier Vandervelde said Germany "is capable of putting millions of well-equipped men in the field in a short time, while the recent completion of the German aviation cartel is the last step in the mighty industrial organization which will be the base of a future war."

HANGCHOW, a large and important rail and water communication center 113 miles southwest of Shanghai, was captured by the Nationalist troops, according to dispatches from the Orient, and thus the Cantonese took another long step in their march on the coast city. Hangchow had been held by Marshal Sun Chuan-feng, an ally of the northern generals and his army is about all that stands between the Cantonese and the occupation of Shanghai. More British troops were landed at that city last week, bringing the number up to about 4,000, besides a hospital unit. Measures for the defense of the international concession have been completed, and so far the British government is ignoring the flood of protests from Chinese organizations and from laborites in England.

American troops on shipboard ready for shore duty at Shanghai will number 2,300, for the transport Chaumont with 1,200 marines is due there February 24. The cruisers Cincinnati, Marblehead and Richmond were being held at Honolulu.

In Honan province there were preparations for a great battle. The Nationalists were concentrating north of the Yangtse river to meet the combined Manchurian and Shantung armies, which were about to attempt a drive through the province on Hankow and Kiukiang. Marshal Wu Pei-fu and Gen. Feng Yu-hsiang have powerful armies in that region and were reported as waiting for an opportunity to jump in and help the winning side. That a terrific conflict is pending is undoubted.

SUCCESSFUL operations of the Liberal rebels of Nicaragua, especially in compelling the government forces to evacuate Matagalpa where there are large American interests, caused a good deal of anxiety in Washington. So last week the destroyer transport Melville, with 200 marines and six airplanes aboard, was ordered from San Diego to Corinto, and the Henderson was ordered to take 1,200 marines from Quantico. The airplanes, which are equipped for bombing, will be used for reconnoissance work and also probably will prevent the shipment of arms to the rebels. Rear Admiral Latimer recently had a conference with Dr. Juan B. Sacasa, the Liberal leader, and our government hopes this will result in a peaceful solution of the embroglio.

PARTS of Dalmatia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, in Jugo-Slavia, experienced a severe earthquake which took scores of lives—perhaps as many as 600—and destroyed many dwellings. In Sarajevo, a sinister memory, great masses of snow and ice, loosened by the tremors, crushed buildings and killed a dozen persons, and there were great mountain slides in other places. Railway lines were broken and relief trains were held up. Several days later another temblor demolished part of the city of Ljubinje, Herzegovina, and killed 91 persons.

The United States, too, had a disaster, this time in southern California where a violent storm that lasted several days resulted in destructive floods and snowslides. Coast towns and the Imperial valley suffered severely and thousands of persons were driven from their homes by the waters. Railroads and trolley lines were washed out, and for a time San Diego was cut off from outside communication. More than a dozen men were killed by a snowslide at Big Creek in a construction camp.

BY A vote of 71 to 17 the senate passed the McFadden bill after breaking up the filibuster by applying cloture. The house already had passed the measure. After the result was announced Senator Glass of Virginia, one of those most active in behalf of the bill, introduced a resolution authorizing the committee on banking and currency to conduct "a thorough investigation of alleged lobbying activities in connection with the banking bill."

The bill is designed to place national banks more on an equality with the banks chartered under state laws. As one means to this end, it permits national banks to establish city-wide branches in states where state laws permit branch banking by state banks.

IN ORDER to dispose of the matter speedily, the house substituted the senate McNary-Haugen farm relief measure for its own bill, and after consideration of it section by section, passed it by a vote of 214 to 178 exactly as it was adopted by the senate. The Republicans were almost evenly divided, 113 voting for the bill and 108 against it. Of the Democrats, 97 voted for the measure and 70 against it.

THREE personal encounters enlivened the proceedings of congress, or disgraced them, according to the point of view one takes. First Senators Glass and Wheeler wrangled over the banking bill, and the Virginian laid violent hands on the Westerner. Then Representatives Tincher and Strong, both of Kansas, fought over the farm relief measure and a few harmless blows were exchanged. On Tuesday that irrepressible pest of the house, Tom Blanton of Texas, tried to whip Representative Bloom of New York during a committee hearing on the District of Columbia Sunday closing bill, and started a general fight. Next day several congressmen commented caustically on Blanton's action and the Texan challenged them to fight him in the gymnasium. Mr. Gallivan of Massachusetts drafted a resolution providing for the appointment of a boxing board to manage future bouts between members.

SEVERAL changes in the diplomatic service were made last week. Hugh R. Wilson of Illinois, chief of the bureau of current information at the State department, was made minister to Switzerland to succeed Hugh Gibson, who goes as minister to Belgium. It was announced that Theodore Brentano, minister to Hungary, was retiring, and J. Butler Wright, assistant secretary of state, was appointed to take his place. Leland Harrison, also an assistant secretary of state, was named minister to Sweden to replace Robert Woods Bliss.

Vincent Massey, the first Canadian minister to the United States, arrived in Washington with Mrs. Massey and was presented to the President.

PANAMA is not satisfied with the new treaty with the United States, and the assembly down there has rejected it in its present form. Minister Alfaro is trying to obtain a renewal of negotiations with the State department. The most objectionable article in the treaty is that which requires Panama to participate in any war involving the United States. This caused unfavorable comment in Europe, where it was alleged the terms affected Panama's participation in the League of Nations. Senor Alfaro was instructed to seek a clarification of the phraseology showing clearly that Panama is not obliged to supply troops to the United States, as is commonly understood from the text.

SECRETARY OF STATE KELLOGG, in an official communication to the senate, denied that the State department had advised or instructed Americans not to comply with the requirements of the Mexican oil laws. Nevertheless, he said, only four of the more than forty American corporations and individuals owning oil properties in Mexico prior to 1917 had applied for confirmatory concessions as required by Mexican law.

NEW wage agreement for the miners of the bituminous coal field was put up to a subcommittee appointed by the joint conference of miners and operators at Miami, Fla. The miners' proposal, offered by President John L. Lewis, called for a new wage contract for a two-year period based on the principle that wage reductions are "inadequate to solve the problems of the industry." Existing ills would be brought before the joint conference which would continue in operation for the duration of agreement.

The operators' proposal, presented by W. H. Haskins, Ohio operator, seeks a continuous wage agreement on a competitive basis with the non-union soft coal industry of West Virginia and Kentucky.

Persian Sees United States as Best Friend

Persia, the oldest monarchy in the world today, looks upon the United States as the best friend of that ancient empire because America has no political ax to grind in her intercourse with foreign nations, according to his excellency Ali Akbar Kiachif, representative of the Persian minister of commerce, who was a visitor in Chicago recently.

"As a consequence of the trust Persia has in the United States Dr. A. C. Millspaugh of this country is the administrator general of finance for Persia," said his excellency. "America has no political interest in my country, therefore we can trust her. American engineers are extending our transportation lines and an American agricultural adviser is engineering the development of Persia in that basic industry.

All Kiachif was the official representative of the Persian government at the Sesequicentennial exposition and is president of H. M. I. Kiachif & Bros. of Constantinople and Persia. Sultan Mahmoud Amerie of the Persian legation at Washington accompanied Ali Kiachif on his trip to Chicago.

Imports from Persia to the United States amount to $10,000,000 annually and consist mostly of objets d'art, rugs, sausage casings and gum tragacanth. While a visitor in Chicago Mr. Kiachif was the guest of Harry Pratt Judson, president emeritus of the University of Chicago.

Another Barry Aims to Win Scull Title

H. A. Barry, son of W. A. Barry, who was champion sculler of England in 1898, and a nephew of Ernest Barry, ex-champion sculler of the world, has challenged Major Goodsell of Australia, holder of the world's sculling championship, to a match for the title. It is suggested that the match be staged at Parramatta, New South Wales, in June.

Barry, who is not yet twenty-five years old, has never been beaten in a scratch sculling event, and in 1920 won the Putney coat and badge, in 1921 the Kingston (London) coat and badge, and in 1925 Doggett's coat and badge. The three events are famous races rowed annually on the Thames.

BUILDING TEAM AROUND COLLINS

Connie Mack Pins Hope for Pennant in Star.

A new infield built around Eddie Collins, his star second baseman of championship days, carries the pennant hopes of sixty-four-year-old Connie Mack in his twenty fourth season as manager of the Philadelphia Athletics.

Returning to the same post he occupied in Mack's famous $100,000 infield combination 16 years ago, Collins, deposed leader of the White Sox will have new Philadelphia co-workers on both right and left. Connie has indicated. Replacing Galloway at short stop will be Joe Boley, acquired from the Baltimore Internationals, while at first base will be Dudley Branom, hard-hitting star from the Kansas City club of the American association. Jimmy Dykes again is slated for third base.

With this combination as a starter, Mack will have probably the best-equipped reserve infield in organized baseball, with Poole for first base, Bishop, second; Galloway, short, and Hale, third.

The changes have been made primarily to bolster one of the weakest-hitting clubs of the 1926 American league campaign. In Collins and Branom he has obtained two players who hit well over .300 last year. Boley also climbed into the select group of the International.

One more heavy artilleryman for the lineup was obtained in the signing of the veteran Zach Wheat, former Brooklyn outfielder, who for years finished among the National league batting leaders. Zach appears slated to patrol left field, with Al Simmons in center and Walter French in right. West and Wilson from Waco, Texas, and Metzler of Wichita Falls will seek to displace the veterans, while Mack also may find room for Bill Lamar.

The pitching staff holding over from last year includes Howard Ehmke, Sam Gray, Ed Rommel and Jack Quinn, right-handers, and Grove, Willis, Walberg and Pate, southpaws. Darrah and Hunter from Dallas, Texas, Shores from Wichita Falls and Yerkes, a Philadelphia product, also are possibilities.

"We've done everything possible to strengthen the team," Mack said. "I figure it will be a tough race, but I have a hunch we will be leading the procession next October. If not, I'm still ready to try again the following year."

Football Strain Among Michigan Stars a Myth

Figures compiled by the University of Michigan indicate that the supposed stress and strain incident to football training is a myth.

Loss of weight throughout the season is not so serious as has been pictured by some critics of the game, the figures show.

Only one man out of more than forty on the Wolverine grid squad suffered loss of weight last season. He was Walter Weber, a fullback, who lost regularly a day before each game and as regularly picked up his weight by the following Tuesday.

Four of Michigan's regulars gained weight during the season, while the weight of the other members of the squad was fairly constant throughout.

Wins Athletic Honors

Ideal College Man

"Jake" Slagle, Princeton All-American fullback, is an outstanding example of the college man whose success, scholastically as well as athletically, is based on character and volition, in the opinion of Dean Radcliffe Herrmance. "Jake's first year was not so very satisfactory," said the dean, "and he frankly told me that he was no fireball intellectually. He soon showed marked improvement, and, during the last two years, has been in the honor group."

Tiger Wrestlers Beat Penn

Harry Meislahn, heavyweight.

Luggage Is Just a Trifle to Hurst

Tim Hurst, old-time umpire of the majors, often worked behind the plate wearing his street shoes and no guard except a mask. Which recalls the story of the day Tim walked up to the hotel clerk in Pittsburgh and asked him if his uniform had arrived.

"No, sir, but I'll keep my eyes open for it."

After the game Tim again inquired about his uniform. "No, not a thing has come except this cap," said the clerk, exhibiting a blue cap with a small peak.

"That's it," said Hurst.

Headed for Records

Frank Hussey, Boston college star, is, according to Coach Jack Ryder, headed for some new sprinting records. His starting has improved, and great things are expected of him this season.

Pivot Men Popular in Great College Pastime

The boys who snap the ball into play share popularity with the backfield stars when it comes down to voting a new captain for the football team. Bob Reitsch of Illinois and Ken Rouse of Chicago, playing center for their teams, were voted into leadership of the 1927 elevens by their team mates this fall. The tackles usually are represented on the captaincy list, and the players at the ends are honored frequently. The guards, bulwarks of the line, seldom get the call to lead the team, football history shows.

In 1925 three great centers were captains. Bob Brown of Michigan led his team to a championship; Tim Lowry of Northwestern received the trophy as the most valuable player, and Griffen of Iowa, the largest man playing the position in the Big Ten, inspired his fellows to victories over Illinois and Ohio State.

Heavy Champions Should Box Four Times Yearly

Heavyweight champions should fight at least four times a year if they expect to defend successfully their crowns against outstanding rivals, in the opinion of William Muldoon, eighty-one-year-old member of the New York state athletic commission and former trainer for John L. Sullivan.

"Lack of work rather than overwork has been the downfall of every heavyweight champion in the past 50 years," said the veteran expert.

"It looks to me as if Gene Tunney was 'licking himself' the same as Jack Dempsey did—through inactivity. Fighting once a year for a heavyweight champion is not enough."

Muldoon expressed the view that the present crop of heavyweight challengers is the best in the history of the game.

Pirates Take Doctor Along

The management of the Pittsburgh National league baseball club hopes to take a stitch in time this year as concerns training-camp injuries and indispositions. Dr. William L. Marks, for 20 years official doctor of all Carnegie Tech athletics, has been given a two months' leave of absence from the college gym to accompany the team to the Paso Robles camp. Last year the team was handicapped in its spring training activities through injuries.

Record Growing Period

The year 1926 will be recorded by nature as the greatest growing period for a century or more. Foresters have just found that the annual ring of growth made by the forest trees on the Pacific coast during the 12 months of 1926 is twice the width of former years in recent history.

Unusually mild weather, plentiful rainfall and very little wind proved beneficial to forest growth. Recent examination of new growth rings is amazing, report loggers and student foresters. It is possible in the study of ring growth to discover whether former years were cold or warm, in connection with thin or wide expansion of the tree trunks.

Selwood of Sleepy Cat

By FRANK H. SPEARMAN

Copyright by Charles Scribner's Sons. WNU Service.

STORY FROM THE START

At Sleepy Cat Doctor Carpy tells Wentworth, freighting boss, of a shooting scrape in Bartoe's gambling den, in which John Selwood, gambler, in defense of his wounded partner, Dave Tracy, shows remarkable skill and nerve. A year afterward, Selwood, now Wentworth's representative at Sleepy Cat, comes upon a settler whose wagon has mired in a creek. He helps get the outfit clear, after picking up a girl's shoe and seeing and being attracted by the supposed owner thereof in Fyler's (the settler's) wagon. Moses McCracken, a youth, is robbed of $600 in a Sleepy Cat gambling den.

CHAPTER III

Gentleman John.

The evening was young when McAlpin stepped briskly into the gambling room. It was well lighted by handsomely bracketed kerosene lamps on the side walls and by elaborate hanging lamps. The center hanging lamp was a particularly brilliant affair, the pride of the janitor, Bull Page, a broken cowboy, who always saw that this particular lamp was in the pink of good order.

Like one familiar with his surroundings, McAlpin walked directly up the middle of the long room, nodding here and there to an acquaintance, and directed his steps to the upper right-hand corner, in which, apart somewhat from the tables, a flat-topped desk faced McAlpin diagonally. Behind the desk stood a swivel armchair; on a wall shelf behind the chair there reposed a card photograph, crudely framed, of a man in the uniform of a Union soldier. Beside this, but more conspicuous because much larger, stood a glass dome of the kind used to cover French mantel clocks. Under this dome there reposed already, in place of the expensive clock, which had been removed to make place for it, a single slender high shoe, evidently the shoe of a girl of eighteen or twenty years. It showed but little wear and, during the evening, attracted much attention and elicited many questions. But beyond the vague statement that it was there for good luck, no explanation to any one was then or afterward forthcoming from Selwood.

McAlpin watched the play a few minutes with the air of one that had graduated from that form of entertainment, and sauntered back toward the front door. There his active eye fell on a man of medium stature standing with his hands in his pockets, leaning against the door jamb and looking out into the street. He showed in his copper-colored face the hue of an Indian. Bob Scott, partly of Chippewa blood, and carried—a Sioux captive—far from the hunting grounds of his fathers, was now a retainer of John Selwood's. McAlpin ambled up to him like an old acquaintance, which, in fact, he was.

"I'm looking for the boss, Bob," he said with some importance in his tone.

The Indian only drew his hands from his pockets to place them behind his back on the jamb he was leaning against, and smiled in friendly fashion.

"I'm thinking he went up the river. If he did, he ought to be back by now."

"What would he be going up the river for?" asked McAlpin with native suspicion.

"To see a man."

"What man would John Selwood want to see up river?"

Scott smiled enigmatically. "Maybe the old padre—the one that travels that way sometimes with the Blackfeet."

"I hear he let Big Haynes go this morning, Bob," said McAlpin cavalierly. "What for? He was the fastest dealer in the house."

Bob Scott, smiling, only held up his right forefinger and crooked it.

"What does he want to see the old padre about?" demanded McAlpin with an air of impatience.

Scott, looking over McAlpin's shoulder down the street, made a definite announcement. "There comes Selwood, Jim; suppose," he added, smiling evenly, "you ask him."

McAlpin cherished a genuine regard for the young boss, as he sometimes called Selwood, and with all his turns and quirks, loyalty was in the fiber of McAlpin's make-up. He gave value received to whomever he sold his service, and in return had things in his official servitude mostly his own way. He understood perfectly well how to wheedle a boss and how to bully him, when to say things and when to keep silence.

"I can't be put off much longer, John," he declared, low but emphatically, keeping just half a deferential step behind Selwood as the two walked up the gambling hall toward Selwood's desk. "We've got to have more room down there or push some of the mules into the river. The harness room is that crowded you couldn't skin a cat in it without nicking a breech strap."

Selwood walked at a leisurely pace past the well-filled tables, listening to McAlpin, but with his eyes, keen and grayish blue, taking in the scene before him. He was slender, evenly built, and carried himself very lightly—walking with much the springy step of a West Pointer. Two spots of color in his cheeks revealed the constitutional weakness that had brought him to the mountain country—a weakness now so well checked that at twenty-seven he looked fresh and boyish among men who, though hardly older in years, seemed to have felt more heavily the hardships of frontier life. There was nothing aggressive about his appearance; but his gray eyes chilled his manner when his face was in repose, and he was known to waste but few words in reaching a conclusion, and none in pursuing a vain dispute.

He heard patiently McAlpin's complaints as to the crowded condition of the barn, and only reminded him that the coming of the railroad would mean the cutting off of much freight and that there would soon be more room at the barn than business. "And," he added, "don't lose a chance to let go any mules you can sell to advantage."

So saying, Selwood tossed his hat on the desk and sat down. McAlpin hurried through the preliminaries of his story with every indication of nervousness, twirling his cap at intervals over his fingers and hesitating at times for a word or phrase to estimate the effect on his hearer, who was looking, as he listened, over a batch of reports Lefever, the wagon boss, had left on his desk.

But try as he would, McAlpin could gain no clue to the impression he was making. It was only after Selwood looked up at the close of the recital that McAlpin could even guess what he might expect; then Selwood shook his head as if annoyed and his first words dashed McAlpin's hopes.

"Why bring that kind of a story to me?" he asked. He spoke without feeling, but as if his time were being imposed on. "They rob people down there all the time. That's their business," he continued, fixing his eyes again on the papers before him. "Go back to your den and forget yourself."

"John," pleaded McAlpin, low and softly but persistingly, "I want to tell you: this is a hard case, a blamed hard case. It's Bunty Bartoe's work—he's the biggest all-round thief in Sleepy Cat. Starbuck's got an interest in that place. Half the money—I'm saying half, John—goes straight into Starbuck's pocket. It's a crime," exclaimed McAlpin in half-whispered desperation, "the way that man Starbuck is picking up money."

It would have needed a full knowledge of the local situation to realize McAlpin's craft in his last appeal. Selwood, he knew, liked Starbuck less than he did any man in Sleepy Cat. With but a slight acquaintance between the two, there was, on either side, no regard lost. And McAlpin knew that if it worried Selwood as much as it did him to see such men picking up money easily, he could be stirred by the reminder of it.

Yet all he could urge on this score left Selwood cold. And perceiving that no impression was made, but rather that Selwood's eyes were wandering over the room, McAlpin added that Lefever had come in with a new saddle pony that afternoon, and perhaps Selwood would like to step down to the barn a minute to look it over.

This news had quite a different effect on the hard-headed gambler. The pony, a present from Ben Wentworth, the active owner of the wealthy freighting company of which Selwood was a division superintendent, had been eagerly awaited a week—for Selwood loved a horse and the record of his early years in the saddle entitled him to judge one.

The sight of the pony, groomed to an actual polish, did gratify Selwood. "If her action is up to her brag, she's all right," he said, as McAlpin swung the lantern away from the box stall. "I'll try her out later this evening."

Sounding her praises craftily, McAlpin steered his boss into the office, where Mrs. McCracken and Moses sat in solemn silence. Selwood, paying no attention to them, drew a roll of bills and handed one to McAlpin. At that moment McAlpin, thanking him earnestly, jerked his head toward Mrs. McCracken to bid her rise. He hurriedly introduced her to Selwood and pointed to Moses dramatically as Bunty Bartoe's victim.

Moses stood miserably up, but, despite McAlpin's insistent nodding, the woman appeared unable to rise. She tried to, but could not. Selwood cast a cold eye on her. McAlpin bade her tell her story. Fortunately for the unlucky woman, she could not even do that: telling it so many times in so few hours had left her too exhausted even to speak. But she looked the story out of her mournful eyes. They stirred something in Selwood that words would perhaps not have reached. "This is the man, ma'am, that can get you back your money," said McAlpin, pointing emphatically to Selwood, "if he wants to. Tell him," he bawled, starting for the gangway door, "you want him to!"

Hobbling quickly from the room, McAlpin left Selwood at the mercy of the dumb appeal. The woman, galvanized into a sort of life by McAlpin's words, started, rose, sank back into McAlpin's chair, choked, and managed to ask one unfortunate question: "Are you the sheriff, sir?"

A faint grin overspread Selwood's features—it was his only answer.

"Or the marshal, sir?" she ventured.

McAlpin, listening outside, decided she had killed every chance of help. He could not see Selwood's face but felt a heavy silence.

"Is this your mother?" McAlpin after a pause, heard Selwood ask the question of the boy and heard the boy's affirmative answer.

"What kind of specimen are you—"

McAlpin hurried down the barn to get away from the tongue-lashing that he knew was to follow—for Selwood was credited with a frontier vocabulary not alone uniquely forcible but also extremely biting.

The barn boss was brought back to the scene by a sharp call from Selwood, who bade him look after the woman. In the excitement—and much to Selwood's annoyance—she had fainted and fallen into Selwood's arms. When McAlpin had taken her in hand—and as a widower he knew how to hold a baby or a woman—Selwood spoke sharply to Moses and told him to come with him.

He had said no word as to his intentions, but McAlpin knew exactly what they were. Pushing the boy impatiently ahead, Selwood stepped into the street and slammed the door behind him.

Bartoe's place, in the River quarter, besides those periodically victimized within it, had a regular following of the characters that haunt the border-line between honest men and rogues—always a considerable one on the frontier—and a sympathetic following of the parasites moving in and out of Sleepy Cat; men who, like the habitues of Bartoe's, lived wholly by their wits.

It was ten o'clock at night when Selwood walked into this place with Moses McCracken in tow. Bartoe, soft-spoken and with all the words needed for a colloquy but few to waste on compliments, met Selwood with the doubtful grin of a man that can't figure out exactly what is coming. With his eyes roving apologetically from Selwood's words to Moses' solemn face, Bartoe listened attentively to all that was said. Moses, meantime, following earlier explicit directions, was looking carefully at the few men standing in the room. As Selwood finished, Bartoe, resting his eyes on Moses, spoke mildly: "I never saw this fellow before, that I know of. We ain't seen six hundred dollars at once here in a month. This fellow's picked the wrong place, that's all."

Selwood gave no credence whatever to the expected denial, but Moses saved him the trouble of saying so by pointing suddenly to a man sitting alone at a card table across the room, poring over an old and well-thumbed illustrated newspaper. "There's the man that brought me in here—and this"—he looked Bartoe in the eye—"is the man that was dealing the three cards." Bartoe only laughed. Moses, he insisted, quite unruffled, was mistaken—a thing that might happen to any man. "I make mistakes, myself," he said pleasantly to Moses, whose stubbornness in repeating his accusation gave Bartoe no offense.

But Selwood showed immediate interest in the man with the newspaper. He was a liveryman who traded in stolen horses when he safely could, and in stolen goods—using his barn for a fence. Selwood had already suffered at his hands—or his employers, Russell and Wentworth had—and this seemed a time to "round him up proper," as Jim McAlpin would have expressed it.

Selwood raised his voice. "Atkins!" he said. "Look here a minute."

Atkins glanced stupidly over at the three, who stood with their eyes on him. "Come over here, Atkins," said Selwood again.

The expression of Atkins' face promised a poor response to the curt request. "I guess it's about as far from me over to you as it is from you over to me," he suggested, making to move to rise. Selwood wasted no time. He walked straight toward Atkins, who started up in alarm as Selwood briskly approached. "It may not be any farther one way than the other," retorted Selwood, "but you've picked the expensive way. I was willing to let you keep part of your stealings—now—you and Bartoe hand out the six hundred dollars you robbed this lad of at monte."

Men crowded up. Selwood knew every one of them. He knew about what each represented in the way of danger. But he abated nothing whatever of his aggressive insistence. Atkins, sullen and evasive, denying and threatening by turns, was for standing pat, as he had often done before. Bartoe, with better judgment, realized the man they had to deal with. Selwood gave little heed to the war of words kindled by his arbitrary attitude—the only sort of an effective one with the ruffians he was facing. When Atkins had wearied himself with brave words, Bartoe, encouraged by Selwood's silence, intervened more boldly himself. Selwood put up his hand to check both.

"Atkins," he said, without raising his voice, "this isn't the only score I've got to settle with you, but I'll settle this now. You robbed this fellow; you're going to pay him back every dollar you took. Now I'm done with you for the present—shut up, Bartoe"—he turned on the accomplice—"if the six hundred isn't up on my table by eleven o'clock tonight, I'll close this joint in the morning and run you out of town—or, what's just as good, I'll give you a chance to run me out. Just get together your friends—no, don't talk back. You've said it all, Starbuck? Why, yes, call in Starbuck, by all means." Selwood hardly took the trouble to laugh at the threats flung at him. "Yes, I know that, too. Just as much a gambler as you are? Well!" Selwood caught his breath in pleasant acknowledgment. "I hope," he said "—for the honor of a dishonorable profession—that I am more of one. Anyway, if you want a real game in the morning, with Starbuck for an opener, you know now just exactly how to get it."

CHAPTER IV

Starbuck Intervenes.

A wrangle between Bartoe and Atkins followed Selwood's departure—forced and acrimonious on Atkins' part, not cheerful on Bartoe's. Atkins counseled defiance. But Bartoe reminded him sullenly that he had nothing whatever at stake. Atkins had nothing more to do than strike the trail for fresh pastures—he was reputed to carry his roll all in his pocket—and come back to his barn when things blew over; whereas Bartoe faced the immediate loss of his whole establishment. And in the heat of their quarrel Starbuck, the man whose name had been thrown meaningly at Selwood, walked bluffly in on the angry men.

"Yes, Harry told me Selwood had been here." Starbuck named as "Harry," fat, busy Harry Barbanet, who by dint of some crafty bustling about, some skillful eavesdropping, and the exercise of some extraordinary instinct, had possessed himself of the whole story and "scooped" the house by getting first with it to Starbuck's ear. "I know all about what he wanted," continued Starbuck. "What're you going to do?"

His appearance had a quieting effect on the disputants to the degree that they left off abusing each other and turned together to abuse Starbuck. Still in his early thirties, Starbuck, well built, frank in manner, more than equal in suave speech to the worthies in Sleepy Cat, and game in such local encounters as had befallen him, enjoyed an accredited reputation in the River quarter. Not unpleasing in feature—rather light of complexion and alert in bearing, he was looked to as a local arbiter of River quarter difficulties and was, moreover, de facto mayor of Sleepy Cat. I say de facto because the franchise was only a nominal part of Sleepy Cat politics and Starbuck held the title principally by acclamation, so to speak; and held it successfully against other possible claimants.

"What are we going to do?" echoed Bartoe. "We can't do anything without a fight—and nobody can tell how a fight's going to come out. Go talk to Selwood yourself, Starbuck. Is he running this town or are you?"

"What are we paying a mayor for?" demanded Atkins, unpleasantly significant.

Starbuck silenced his nervous baiters by confining a few brief remarks strictly to one-syllable words. Then, tarrying only long enough to absorb all pertinent details of the row, he strode up street to interview Selwood.

Starbuck realized the delicate position in which Selwood's action left him. Two bosses could not exist at the same time in Sleepy Cat, and there was in the situation this further element of uncertainty that Starbuck wanted to solve. He knew Selwood but slightly and knew him chiefly as a man who minded strictly his own business. Did he mean now to aspire for local leadership? Starbuck hoped not but wanted to know.

He bent his steps straight toward Selwood, who stood smoking while he watched with mild interest the play at a table where a new dealer sat installed.

"Selwood?" said Starbuck, inquiringly, putting out his hand. "Yes. You're Starbuck," answered Selwood laconically as he gave him his own hand.

"Can I have a word with you?" asked Starbuck. For answer Selwood, proffering a cigar from his waistcoat pocket, led the way to his table in the corner and pointed to a chair. Both men sat down. Starbuck spoke.

"I don't like to see a quarrel get going in the street, Selwood," he began, with an air of good-fellowship. "Dave Tracy and I didn't always agree. Tracy was getting pretty well along in years and he was a little cranky once in a while—I guess maybe I was, too—"

Starbuck smiled faintly with the candid admission. Selwood's face was receptively non-committal. "But Tracy," continued Starbuck, "had enemies where he might have had friends, which is a foolish policy, in my opinion, for any man." There was no covert hinting in Starbuck's manner—just frank disinterestedness. "Now Bartoe," he went on quietly, "has turned up a little grievance against you. I told him I didn't think there was anything serious to it—nothing but what could be ironed out between man and man—so I said I'd just come and have a little talk with you."

Starbuck paused—not as a man that has said all, but as if inviting the other fellow to say something. Selwood only took his cigar from his mouth, waiting courteously for his interviewer to continue.

"I suppose," resumed Starbuck, not discomposed, "I'm less acquainted with you than I am with most men around town. But I've always heard you spoken of as a reasonable man, a man who didn't want anything more than what's right. Bartoe feels you came down on him pretty strong—I suppose you had some good reason for what you did."

Selwood knocked the ashes from his cigar and broke the pause with a question—not precisely an expected one. "What difference did you ever have with Dave Tracy?" he asked, without changing the expression of his eyes, and speaking in friendly tones and in a merely casual manner.

"Why, none at all that I recall this minute," declared Starbuck, covering the retreat of his surprise with a little celerity of answer. "I said we didn't maybe always agree. But I'm no man to remember little differences—they don't mean anything to me. And nobody was sorrier than I was to hear about it when Dave was shot, down at Bartoe's. You sure dosed the bunch that did it. Dave can thank you he's alive."

"It was poor shooting," murmured Selwood, inoffensively meditating. "And, as you say, Dave is getting on in years. And it was pretty near enough to finish him. Dave says," he rambled on, quietly, "that you and he split because he wouldn't pay you money for protection."

Starbuck showed his first impatience. "If Tracy said that—" he began.

The President's Church

ST. JOHN'S Episcopal church, across Lafayette square from the White House in Washington, built as a convenience and to split the difference between Old. St. John's in Georgetown (West Washington) and old Christ church in the southeastern part of town, in the early days when the question of transportation was a problem, gradually became the house of worship of Presidents and, as a consequence, to be known as the President's church.

This quaint and dignified structure, which is numbered among the oldest relics of its class within the present city, dates from 1818. Obviously, its historical associations are many.

Originally constructed in the form of a simple Greek cross, its convenient location so popularized it that it was enlarged to the form of a Latin cross, a portico fronted by six plain columns and a three-story steeple added, and a special pew set aside for the President.

Presidents Madison, Monroe, Adams, Jackson, Van Buren, Harrison, Tyler, Fillmore, Buchanan, Arthur and Roosevelt, numerous cabinet officials, officers of the army and navy, members of the diplomatic corps and ambassadors of foreign countries, are said to have worshiped here.

Many persons of prominence in world affairs have been married in or buried from this church. The remains of Rev. William Hawley, who was its rector for twenty-eight years, lie beneath the chancel.

Among its cherished possessions is a ten-thousand-dollar communion chalice of solid gold set with diamonds, made from the jewelry of a member who willed it to the church.

Our Largest Monument

STONE mountain, some distance east of Atlanta, Ga., is often referred to as the eighth wonder of the world. Dropped there by nature in a freak mood, it is miles and miles from any other mountain.

This huge bulk of granite rises abruptly from the level plains, is about 700 feet high on the steep side, a mile to the summit on its sloping side, a mile long and approximately seven miles around at the base.

No less wonderful than the mountain itself are the plans to carve upon its precipitous face a memorial calculated to last as long as time shall be.

The north face has been dedicated to the Daughters of Confederacy and the Stone mountain memorial long since begun to take form. A noted sculptor was commissioned to carve deep into and high upon its face the world's greatest monument—an imperishable memorial—to the Confederacy of 1861-1865, at an estimated cost of $2,000,000.

The central figure, Gen. Robert E. Lee—the idol of the South, is to be surrounded by General "Stonewall" Jackson, President Jefferson Davis and others high in Confederate ranks, followed by likenesses of five additional generals from each of the thirteen Confederate states and approximately 1,000 other military personages—the whole depicting a striking procession of men, horses and guns coming around one side, across and down the other side.

It is said to have taken 22,000 drill holes to outline General Lee's hat, the brim of which measures almost 34 feet across. Some of the carving will bite into the rock to a depth of 20 feet.

The Church of St. Louis of France

THE old St. Louis cathedral—now known as the Church of St. Louis of France—is said to be "The most historic church in the Mississippi valley." It stands on or near the site where the first mass said in St. Louis was celebrated on March 14, 1764.

The first edifice to occupy this spot was a primitive log structure put up in 1770. It gave way to a second built of palisades and first occupied in 1776. The present church, begun in 1831, was dedicated in 1834, and stands today a venerable and historic monument to St. Louis.

Of stone construction and well preserved, it is fronted by a row of weather-beaten columns, carries Hebrew and Latin quotations over the main portal and is topped by a steeple crowned by the customary cross. Inside, its width usually in proportion to its length, there being five aisles, both the altar rail and the organ loft supports extend far out, the simple frosted windows smack of old-timeness, and the throne is decorated with the fleur de lys of France.

By virtue of the fact that the first Bishop of St. Louis was a classmate of Pope Gregory XVI, it happened that this church was the recipient of favors which are said to have been bestowed upon no other church in the world except the Basilicas in Rome. One of the most noteworthy favors grants an indulgence which is granted only to pilgrims visiting the seven Roman Basilicas. By special indult this indulgence, it is said, may be gained by visiting the three altars in this church—though no other church or cathedral is so privileged.

Porpoise Flesh Like Pork

The porpoise is considered the most common of all the cetaceans. The name has a Latin origin, porco-pesce, hog-fish. It is found in almost all the European seas, and on the American coast. Its length is about six feet. Its fin appears on the middle of its back, and its jaws have numerous small teeth. The entire body is covered with a layer of fat an inch thick. The flesh beneath is pink, and its taste is said to resemble pork.—Montreal Family Herald.

Burning Coal Mine Boon to Gardeners

An underground coal fire at Redhill, England, enables gardeners to grow plants outdoors in the dead of winter, and, it is said, get better results than if the plants were grown in a hothouse.

Vegetables twice the size of others grown in Worcestershire, and potatoes, which, when dug up, are quite warm, are told of by the gardeners as produced by the reason of this underground furnace, which has been burning in old worked-out galleries of coal mines. A gardener who specializes in flowers, says that he has grown blooms in the open which were superior to any he could force in his hothouses and which won prizes in flower shows.

The fire presents little danger to local property, since it is confined to a definite area. Its only visible signs are a few wisps of smoke curling out of holes in the ground.

Lost Will Used to Wrap Pat of Butter

How a will was found wrapped round a pat of butter was a story told before a Paris (France) court. A wealthy widow died in 1905, leaving her fortune of a million francs to her godchild. The will, however, could not be found, and the natural heirs took possession. A year later a workman bought a pat of butter at a market. It was wrapped in paper which proved to be the missing will. The mystery of how it came there has never been cleared up. The godchild's parents started legal proceedings, and were obliged to borrow 30,000 francs from a friend to carry on the fight. They received a million francs in trust for their daughter. The friend who advanced the 30,000 francs is now suing the heiress for the return of the loan.

COLDS, chills and changes in temperature impose extra strain on our kidneys. Sluggishness of function is apt to permit some retention of body-poisons in the blood and make one more susceptible to the ills of winter. Presence of this unfiltered waste makes one listless, tired and achy—causes drowsy headaches, dizziness and often a toxic backache. New of Menlo Park

John W. Classen, of Atherton, has filed the last will and testament of his sister, the late Louise Marie Classen, who died on February 21, 1927, in the superior rourt of this county. The will is holographic and was executed on May 10, 1919. By its terms the sum of $500 is bequeathed to her nephew, Willard J. Classen, of Ventura. The residue of the estate is left in equal shares to her brother and sister, John W. Classen and Mrs. Minnie C. Knust, both residents of the county. Both are named as executors of the will to serve without bonds. The value of the estate will not exceed the sum of $20,000. The nephew mentioned in the will is the only son of John W. Classen of Atherton and the residuary legatee.

Constable F. B. Grill has purchased the pretty Wright cottage on Amelia avenue and has moved ino the residence. Mr. Grill has disposed of his chicken business, conducted for many years at the Deming estate on Encinal avenue, to Jacob Ferrere, an experienced chickenman.

This evening, Friday, a ham supper will be given by the ladies of the Presbyterian church at the parsonage. The ham, with the delightful trimmings, will be cooked and prepared by the beautiful young girls of the church. Those who attend may contemplate in advance a delectable dinner prepared by experts.

The American Securities Company and Mabel J. Coryell, wife of J. B. Coryell, on Wednesday filed a suit in the superior court against the Town of Atherton to have certain portions or all of ordinance number 50, known as the zoning ordinance passed and adopted by the trustees of the Town of Atherton on July 29, 1925. This law regulates, restricts and segregates the location of industries in the several classes of business, trades and callings and divides the town into residential and commercial districts and unrestricted residential districts. The complaint alleges that the property owned by the pltintiffs on the highway is not included in the zone of business, that the property on the highway is worth $125 a front foot as business property and only valued at $25 a front foot as residential land. Plaintiff prays that this ordinance may be rescinded and that plaintiffs may be able to sell their holdings as business vroperty.

Menlo Parlor, N. D. G. W., will give its monthly card party in Duff and Doyle hall Thursday afternoon, March 10. Good prizes selected for the winners of the games.

The petition of the people of Menlo Park asking the trustees of Atherton to annex this territory is being generally signed by all classes. The taking of signatures will be completed next week when the petition is to be presented to the trustees of Atherton to take action. I is believed he board will authorize the election but it is doubtful if a resolution will be passed by the present trustees officially granting the request for the merger. However, that remains to be seen. In 'th meantime the people are biding their time by filling the petition with their signatures.

The grammar school trustee election takes place on March 25 to fill one vacancy, that of Mr. Poisen, who declines to again be a candidate. Several have signified their intention of making the race for the thankless job without salary or compensation of any kind. The names of the respective candidates will be published next week.

The scarcity of houses in Menlo Park is becoming alarming. The wealthy residents that have been hibernating in San Francisco will begin to occupy their summer homes this month and there will be no quarters for their chauffeurs and other servants who live in town. Applicants for small dwellings are turned away every day by the local real estate men who have no listing for such houses.

A well-known dry goods firm has leased one of the large stores in the bank building on the highway and will open it by the first of the month. The store will fill a long fell want in Menlo Park.

The big minstrel show given for the benefit of the homeless children by the native sons drew a large crowd that filled the New Menlo Theatre to the doors last Tuesday evening. Such celebrities as Jack Doyle, Elmo Cornelius, Harry Morey, Ed Derry, John Morey and Joe Kelly, fully sustained their reputations as entertainers by their songs, witty sallies, "Grim" jokes and attracive makeups. It was a good show and the big crowd went away happy and delighted with the splendid efforts of the local talent. It was a colorful affair, the black clouds appearing on the stage having no silver linings.

Tuesday the local fire department was called out to an incipient fire in the basement of the grammar school building. The blaze was extinguished before any great damage was done, thanks to the promptness of the Menlo Park Fire Department.

All local real estate men report a brisk business this week. The demand for Menlo Park property is becoming quite snappy and active encouraging those who buy and sell the earth, realtors we mean.

The St. Patrick's Day Frolics in the Hall of the Nativity on Mar. 16 promises to draw a large house. The program is to the very best ever presented to the people of Menlo Park. Among the big features will be Delmer Daves, the famous Stanford monologist and Alvonzo Cass and Peggy Randall, also of Stanford. The latter will appear in "Down in the Bowery."

This evening, Friday, "Blue Blazes" will be shown in the New Menlo Theatre; serial, "Ace of Spades"; comedy, "Buster Heart Beats." Saturday evening, "Kosher Kitty Kelly" will be presented, Viola Dana, Vera Gordon and Nat Carr appearing; comedy, "Beauty Almund." Sunday and Monday evenings, "Stella Dallas"; comedy "Grimm" and "Help Wanted." Tuesday evening, "The Gorilla Hunt." Every one should see this picture. Wednesday evening, George O'Brien in "Fig Leaves"; comedy, "The Gosh Darn Mortgage." Thursday evening, "Scarlet Saint"; comedy, "Dummy Love."

The Southern Pacific Railroad Company has begun the work of repairing the square around the depot. A drainage system is being constructed to drain in the poud in the middle of the square that has been an eyesore to the people of Menlo Park for a number of years. The square itself is to be improved and beautified. It is to be macadamized and a smoothe surface to be put down so that the thoroughfare will be one of the finest in the state.

The numerous friends of L. E. Harris, editor of the Menlo Park Recorder, will be glad to hear that he is improving nicely at a hospital in San Jose, and will be able soon to resume his work here.

A big campaign of building will start here during the month. Many homes are to be erected in Stanford Park, Menalto Park and other places in this district. It is believed there will be a scarcity of mechanics to do the work. Real estate men here report brisk business during the week. Many people are cominy from across the bay to make their homes in Menlo Park, thanks to the Dumbarton bridge.

NEED OF COURTESY IN PARKING EMPHASIZED BY ASSOCIATION

Courtesy in driving is constantly being called to the attention of the motorist but courtesy is susceptible of equal emphasis in the matter of parking, although not often stressed in this respect, according to D. E. Watkins, secretary and general manager of the California State Automobile Asocociation. Showing consideration for other motorists will go a long way toward solving the parking problem, he pointed out.

"The problem of finding a place to leave one's car becomes one of the most acute the motorist faces," said Watkins, "particularly when big events draw large numbers of motor vehicles to one central point.

"It formerly was true only in the large centers, but now even th business district of the small community is offering a perplexinb problem to the motorist who needs a place to leave his car while shopping or making a business call.

"In a survey conducted by the American Automobile Association in many large cities recently, it was found that an average of ten parking places in each block were not available simply becuse those cars already parked had taken much more room than was necessary.

"If every motorist could and woold ge unselfish about utilizing available parking space, it would be of tremendous advantage to his fellow car owners."

DUBLIN CANYON ROAD RECONSTRUCTION PLANNED

One of the important contracts expected to be let at an early date by the State Highway Commission is that for widening and reconstruction of the Dublin Canyon road from Dublin to Hayward. This section of State highway, included in the Povernor's budget, is 7.8 miles long and the reconstruction cost is estimated at $390,000.

The Dublin Canyon road was constructed by Alameda county and was taken into the State highway system several years ago as a paved route, ccording to the Highways Bureau of the California State Automobile Association. The route has been considered one of the most dangerous highways in the bay region, the Association Highways Bureau reports, because of the many sharp curves and grades and the present type of surfacing.

The road was inspected by the new highway commission and R. M. Morton, State highway engineer, recently in anticipation of the proposed reconstruction work.
